Good Old Fashioned Socializing

An Afternoon of Wine Flights & Homemade Signature Pastas

Held in the mezzanine at Trattoria Trecolori - amongst a beautifully draped stage, exposed brick accent wall and walk-in wine pantry; Toasting The Town teamed with Montcalm Wines for quite the afternoon indeed! Homemade gnocchi, tortellini and ravioli dishes coupled with prosecco, chianti and sangria... oh my! Author & Historian, Dr. Mark Lender (Drinking in America), kept the afternoon light with tales of an Italian grandmother. 'MaMa Mia!' - it was a red-sauce(d) afternoon indeed!

"Italian food and wine in the city is classic NY. Toasting The Town is classic NY!" (Devin C.)

"Brunching, learning and laughing with friends has never been so delicious!" (Gillian S.)

Toasting The Town produced a day of old fashioned fun, dramatic performances, guest speakers and 'edutainment.' An afternoon where 80 guests gathered to enjoy a boozy brunch of sorts - but one where they could learn about Italian Wine making/importing, pasta making and the general history of Italians migrating to and settling in New York!

Montcalm Wines & Trattoria Trecolori were able to showcase their 'best of,' in food and drink to a captive consumer audience. New 'regulars' for both businesses were born.

Toasting The Town is a free e-newsletter and timeless publication, designed to entertain and educate residents of any city, town or village, on the heritage of their local surroundings. Our stories recount history - authored with the intent of lifting readers out of their seats and into the world, to explore.
